The Thesis Role of Virtual Friendship and Community Networks in the Life of Adolescents is dealing with rather new phenomena of virtual friendship on the internet social network that is connected with young generation to 20 years old.

The text consists of two main parts. In the introducing section the main characteristics of comunity social networks in connection to adolescents described on the basis of theoretical analyse, interpretation of literature and description of their main functions. Especially social networking site Facebook is detailed characterized, because virtual friendship is mainly connected with it.

The practical part contains research on theme of online communities in the life of adolescents. A public inquiry and a questionnaire were used as research tools. Four goals and six hypothesis were defined. Two hypothesis were verified.