

10.2. Summary

The text briefly described institutes of the intellectual property rights, their nature and specific characteristic in the context of production and trade with counterfeits and pirated copies, the nature of such unlawful acts and identified and characterized bodies active in the fight against this phenomenon.

It also analyzed the tools available to the owner of the intellectual property rights to protect its assets in the context of the existing national and Communitarian legislation, particularly with regards to their availability, functionality and costs, including assessing their effectiveness and potential feedback to the right holder.

The third part of this work is focused on detailed description of the process of owner of rights in connection with the use of so-called institution of customs measures and simplified or judicial procedure, with the focus on the legal status of the owner of rights in relation to the customs authorities and the people involved in the importation, which is the subject of such measures, including the legal options of the right holder in a particular situation, process and consequences of selected steps.

Finally, the last part evaluated the advantages and disadvantages of these methods to protect intellectual property, including analysis of the pitfalls and negatives of the current legislation and suggestions for its improvement.