

The aim of this thesis, which is concerned with the topic Administrative Punishment By Customs Authorities Of the Czech Republic, is to clarify the problems of administrative punishment with a special focus on administrative delicts handled by customs authorities. The thesis offers an excursion into the history of administrative punishment which is followed by a passage about the history of customs administration with a sketch of the present-day competences of customs administration as a security body. The main part is dedicated to administrative delicts, i.e. offenses as well as other groups of administrative delicts. The thesis contains theoretical solutions of the administrative law accompanied by problems of concrete administrative delicts, which are to be handled by customs authorities. The sphere of detecting and handling the administrative delicts, including the remedy measures and possible court protection is an inseparable part of the problems of administrative punishment.