

TITLE:

The beginning and development of group performance in the Czech Republic

SUMMARY:

The thesis represents the beginning and development of group performance in the Czech Republic. It creates a complex summary of group performance from beginning till to now. It uses methods of induction and deduction, it contains analysis or progressive methods. The result of this thesis is the description of the main changes in the development of group performance as are the place and size of the exercise area, the number of performances, musical accompaniment or used tools and equipment. The changes are seen in the charts.