Abstract

Title: Analysis of sports-leisure activities of children of an older school-age in Prague 11 – South city

Objectives: The aim of my thesis is to map the options for leisure activities in Prague 11. I want to find out:

a) the involvement of children in the age of the early adolescence in sport
b) opinion of that children on the conditions for sports and physical activities.

The work includes not only the organized form of sports activities, we are also interested in disorganized sports activities, which options are often limited to the Prague settlement. Furthermore, we are interested in the view of the responsible employees of some sports organizations in Prague 11 on sports and leisure activities.

Methods: For my thesis I took advantage of my knowledge of methods of qualitative and quantitative research. I used qualitative research in the context of mapping organizations and institutions on the Prague 11, further in the structured and informal interview with the representatives of some of the organisations and with the competent persons from the Department of education and culture, who are engaged in physical education, sport and leisure time on the Prague 11. I used quantitative method in the questionnaire and research questions.

Results: South City-Prague 11 offers plenty of organized and non-organic activities for the pupils of the second degree of primary schools. Children are more interested in organized sport, although many sports clubs in the place of residence are not available. The most popular sport is football for boys, for girls to dance. From the research results:

a) boys sport more than girls
b) boys prefer racing collective activities.

Keywords: sport, leisure time, older school-age
