

The diploma thesis is focused on helping children of immigrants with their integration into educational systems and even to their life in new country.

The aim of my research is to link the theoretical and practical aspects of the issue of helping immigrant children in their difficult situation.

The theoretical part covers the theoretical interpretation of difficult life situations in relation to the children of immigrants as a target group and their role in the future new home. It analyzes the problems of population migration, the emergence of ethnic minorities and the impact of those issues on the lives of children of immigrants. The thesis emphasizes the need of learning the language of the new home country as quickly as possible and also introduces programs of the Czech Republic and other European countries in the field of education of immigrant children.

The empirical part consists of testimonies of immigrants' children gathered through field research and through interviews using a questionnaire.

The practical outcome of this diploma thesis is to use the results in the creation of a project aimed at helping immigrant children.