

ABSTRACT

My work is focused on adoption of foreign language and language skills of Czech football players in Germany, Austria and Switzerland.

The basis of my research is a complex of ten dialogues with contemporary or former football players, who helped to analyse their language skills.

Information I gained give us a full survey about German language during their staying – it shows their original knowledge, requirements of their clubs, possibilities of option to learn and their consequences and the reached language level. As well it was shown, that the situations can occur, which can make the adoption of the language easier or harder. Getting of language skills proved to be very individualistic phenomenon. The linguistic education of football players is complicated by the fact, that commonly used German language is different from the language used on the football pitch.

Four dialogues in German language allowed me the detailed language analysis.
