

In the present work we have focused on comparison of different implementation of memory for plausible agents in multi-agent environment. I have created a simulation whereby the agent are struggling to fulfill their need to eat. To succeed they have to learn the locations of food resources using the implemented spatial memory and an ability to communicate with each other. Later the agents are evaluated according to the level of hunger throughout the simulation.