

Summary

This bachelor's thesis, entitled Barbers and surgeons of Prague in early modern times pursues medical and health professions of Prague in early modern times. It's focused on the end of the seventies of 15 th. century till the end of 17 th. century. It deals with the main development of these professions and with the separation of barbers and surgeons. One chapter is about bathhouses in this time because it is a workplace of these professions. There also chapters including sources and literature, which were used for this bachelor's thesis. In one chapter is summed up development of the organization of guilds. Next part is dedicated to bathhouses and contain main information about their form at that time. Basics of this bachelor's thesis are chapter including single professions, which were chosen for this thesis. They are focused on the beginnings, development and final form of these medical and health professions. Except of the main profession are mentioned another professions of this kind, which are joined with barbers and surgeons. In the end of this thesis is summary of the whole work and supplements. Aim of this bachelor's thesis is give information about medical and health professions, their progress, common beginnings and final separation.