

The thesis deals with rheumatic diseases, particularly ankylosing spondylitis and its treatment options and rehabilitation care.

The work is divided into two sections, the general part and special part. General part focuses on the summarization of theoretical knowledge related to ankylosing spondylitis and possible procedures for its treatment. The special section is devoted to the case report of a patient with ankylosing spondylitis