Abstract

This work will focus on measuring the rain drop size distribution during several episodes of precipitation. From the data matrix a simplified graph - color contour maps were drawn. The dynamics of the size of rain drops during a rain will be linked to the type of precipitation and global movement of air masses from withholding episode.