

Abstract

This diploma thesis called Information policy of Republic of Finland is describing Finnish e-government in present time. The text talking about Finnish Regulatory Authority – FICORA. This authority is subordinated to Ministry of transport and communications and its main mission is making available information, protecting them, but also secure data transmission. With data protection organization helping the National Security Authority or the NSA.

The text also describes Finnish information policy, its beginning, the present and the future strategy. It reveals the structure and organization of the whole information system, points out the obstacles it had to Finnish government in implementing e-government deal and what recommendations were given to the State by the OECD.

Furthermore, this work demonstrates the most important portals, strategic plans and projects of the Ministry of Finance that the project e-government shielded.