

Annotation

The main aim of this diploma thesis, that names „New challenges of the Surveillance theory“, is to describe the surveillance theory in today's social network society by using information theory. Accordingly, I will verify the theory of surveillance in two case studies. First case study verifies an impact of Facebook's profiles content on the hiring decisions. The second case study analyzes regular day of concrete person in context of surveillance. Both case studies demonstrate surveillance in different surveillance sites.