

Abstract:

This paper is an attempt to an alternative approach to the problem of touch connecting area of new media and feminist discourse. The theme and content of the work is firmly connected to show the situation of the touch in the context of current development of technology. The result is the body of the text showing the irony of touch.