

Abstract

This thesis deals with the research on the breakup of Yugoslavia and its reflection in the contemporary Serbian society. Results of this research reveal how the citizens of Serbia evaluate the key events of modern Serbian (Yugoslavian) history after twenty years from the breakup of SFRY and thirteen years from the NATO bombing of Yugoslavia. The thesis focuses mainly on the course of events after the death of J. B. Tito, the breakup of SFRY and the following conflicts, the NATO bombing of Yugoslavia and the gradual integration of Serbia into the EU. The research was carried out in Belgrade, Nis and Novi Sad. The main method of heuristic research was the sociological survey conducted in the form of questionnaires. In the survey participate predominantly persons with high education divided for the purpose of the survey according to sex and age.
