

Abstract

This diploma thesis entitled “Social Pro-choice movement in Ireland and Switzerland” aims to gain insight into Pro-choice organizations as a social movement in the Republic of Ireland and Switzerland. At first I tried to define what I actually mean by term "pro-choice". I also outlined some of the definitions of social movements and theories that deal with social movements and give an insight into their research.

The next chapter is already devoted to the Ireland. Here I present a brief history of the republic, political system, economy, language, religion, and especially the history of the abortion law. In the next subsection about Pro-choice organizations I am writing about the creation and development of Pro-choice organizations in this country. And finally there is also the research part of this work, which is focusing on the frame analysis of the leaflets.

The third chapter focuses on Switzerland. In this section are the same chapters focused on the history, politics, economics, language, religion, history, abortion law history, Pro-choice organizations history and the frame analysis.

In the last chapter, I compared these two countries from the point of view of the frame analysis, their success and I could not ignore the political and cultural system.

Key words: social movement, Pro-choice, Ireland, Switzerland, frame analysis