

Throughout the introduction to this bachelor thesis I would like to narrate the issue of a chronic kidney failure. The causes, symptoms, diagnosis, cure as well as the quality of life of patients diagnosed with this condition, will be mentioned.

We will learn what principle hemodialysis is based on, what its complications might be and what requirements have to be met, in order for the patient to undergo a hemodialysis treatment.

My aim will be to depict the problems caused by this illness in a family, work place and one's social life. The assessment of this issue will be based on information gathered from a survey conducted by myself at the hemodialysis center.

My thesis will be concluded, with the use of a graphic and verbal description, by an analysis of the survey questionnaire and a disclosure of the data and final results about the quality of life of hemodialysis patients which participated in the research.
