ABSTRACT:

The main aim of this thesis is describing the effects of establishing the temporary term of office for the heads of nursery schools, if the 6years-long term of office is long enough for the heads to reach their goals. Is the implementation of this temporary term of office motivating for the heads in their better achievement or does this law amendment lead to some frustration of their personality?

The second aim of this thesis deals with the fact how the founders of the nursery schools use the possibility of establishing the public competitions for the position of the head of nursery schools – why the competitions have been established or why the founders do not use the possibility to establish them and also if the number of the candidates for this position is increasing or decreasing.

The researching part of the thesis focuses on the experience of the heads, founders and the regional councils after the amendment of the law. The research has been supported with the analysis of the opinions of the heads after the amendment of the amendment and its positive and negative effects.

The researching methods that have been used in the thesis include personal interviewing or using questionnaires. The heads of nursery schools, the founders of schools and the employees of the regional council of Plzeň were the respondents of the mentioned techniques.

Key words:

Head of nursery schools, term of office, public competition
