

Abstract

This work deals with the Prague Uprising in May 1945. The main area of research is broadcasting Czech National Council, which was the highest authority for the organization of the rebellion on the right of the radio. And one hand Czech radio, but also Prague street local radio. This work deals with the way Czech National Council communicate with the radio as he passed messages to be sent, who were the people who these broadcasts were in charge, a significant space in the work focuses on the very content of broadcast messages, which are divided by days.

The operational objective of this work is to deepen knowledge of the Prague Uprising itself, as the author of the text impression that this event is not very well known, while fighting on the barricades of Prague is one of the largest battles of Czech history, when within a few days of May 1945, died 2000 fighters.