The goal of this thesis was to design and create a third-person flight action game in 3D. The theoretical part of this work includes analysis of the action game environment, the concept of the physical model for the use in movement and orientation in 3D, discussion about artificial intelligence used in this genre and specification of own map format. This work also includes the implementation of such game with a compatible map generator.