

This thesis is dedicated to relationship between Religions and Human Rights in the region of African horn. In order to understand correctly situation of human rights in this area it is necessary to describe history of development of Human Rights on European continent and in Africa. Futhermore the attention is drawn to the different apprehension of individual and his role in the community, which is reflected both in African culture and delimitation of human rights. The thesis also pays attention to the characteristic of African horn and its individual countries. This text surveys reflecting of long-term critical situation in this region to the observence of Human Rights and role of Religion on theirs promotion.