

This bachelor thesis contains brief description of physical principles of thermonuclear fusion and some technological realization. Description of neutron diagnostic and measurement is a part of the thesis. Deconvolution of neutron spectrum is a ill-posed problem. The problem is described and solved by some methods. The methods are applied to simulated data, experimental data from scintillator NE213 and activation probe.