

ABSTRACT

The topic of the thesis are the special educational needs of pupils with specific learning difficulties. The aim of this paper is to explore the awareness of parents about the possibility of using individual educational plan for the education of children with learning disabilities and support the role of parents in educational process. The theoretical base of the thesis discusses the concept of specific learning disorders, their etiology, classification, diagnosis. It also defines individual education plan, describes the basic principles on which this plan is based on. The practical part includes quantitative research questionnaire method that detects the condition of awareness of parents on this issue, a description of the data and their subsequent evaluation.

Keywords:

Specific learning difficulties, individual education plan, dyslexia, diagnostic of specific learning difficulties ,special learning condition