

Abstract

The study of life of various groups of population has become in today's society increasingly important. Society in its complexity is being continuously differentiated and offers many questions not only of mainstream society, but also other, less studied groups around us. This bachelor thesis aims to contribute to research in daily life of specific socially deprived population group. Using interviews with direct and another key actors will seek to identify and objective evaluate spacial relations and spacial behavior of homeless population in the central part of Prague 5 - Smíchov. Presents also both their social characteristics and social relations with their neighborhood, including other actors. It tries to put life and motivations of the people on the street in a social context.

Keywords: homelessness – spacial aspects – social aspects – everyday life – central Smíchov