

Abstract

Russia with its great area seems to demand dynamic changes. In last 25 years, this country came through fundamental changes. From Soviet undemocratic 'federal facade', through stormy transition period of 90's, rich especially on increasing of regional ambitions seeking power.

Through elementary reforms led by Vladimir Putin, to contemporary situation. This bachelor thesis aims to research and describe changes of federal elements, which come along with, and to critically value their influence. Thesis is trying to discover real face of federalism in Russian Federations.

Despite tighly connected net of formal and unformal practise. As its goal is trying to reach and demontrate conclusions of its research focused on the Republik of Tatarstan, our case-study.