

Title: Protection against corruption and bribery and their prevention

Abstract

My diploma thesis should describe the contemporary issues of corruption and then it should show us the differences between corruption and lobbying. After that I would like to focus on the current legislation which mentions corruption. Finally, I would highlight the necessity of prevention.

Initially, I would try to define corruption, describe the origin reasons of corruption and its dividing. The next part of the first chapter includes the methods of measurement, which are used for taking an imagination about the extent of the corruption in this age.

The following chapter describes lobbying and the other terms which belong to it. The main goal is an effort to distinguish the situation when it is still lobbying and the situation when the legal line of lobbying is already broke.

The next chapter includes current legislation which concerns the problem of corruption. Because of the quite extensive legislation I try to focus on the regulation in the criminal law and in the business law. One part of this chapter discusses the effective repentance, which could again appear in our legislation.

The fourth chapter points to necessity of prevention in this issue. Corruption is a global problem and the solving of problem with corruption is very difficult. Because of it is necessary to take care of prevention.

In conclusion, I struggle to suggest the ways which could influence the restrictions of corruption and which could make the current situation better.
