

The needs of families caring for seniors suffering by dementia. The needs of families caring for old persons with dementia are serious social issue. The goal of my bachelor s work is to describe those needs with respect to their fulfilment by the field respiting care of Czech alzheimer society (later ČALS). I try to investigate if caring families know their needs and how are their needs fulfilled by the field respiting care. I ve chosen the field respiting care provided by ČALS. I ve organised four personal sessions with families members caring for the senior with dementia. On the basis of sessions I have established specific needs of families members caring for this kind of seniors and I have described how were their needs fulfilled by the field respiting care by ČALS. There are enclosures at the end of my work containing literal transcriptions of all four sessions, description and characteristic of involved persons. My work discovery allows another point of view of caring persons needs by care providers.
