

This bachelor thesis deals with the topic of domestic violence committed on women. The aim of this thesis is to penetrate into the issue of domestic violence, using professional literature and described life stories of abused women to describe factors that had impact on the origin of domestic violence in their families, including problems they had to cope with during their living with violent partner. The thesis is divided into theoretical and practical part. In theoretical part I concern generally with the characteristics of domestic violence. I try to clarify the basic terms, describe its categories, forms and risk factors that affect the origin of domestic violence on women. In the conclusion of this part I deal with legislating perspective of this issue, with prevention, the issue of gender and status of women in our society. In the practical part I describe life stories of abused women and carry out subsequent analysis. I searched for the reasons of origin of domestic violence. Nearly almost the basic factor is the experience of victim or the offender with pathological phenomena earlier in their primary families. Apart from that, I was interested in the fact why abused women have got big difficulties to release from domestic violence. The mission of this thesis is to inform the public of destiny of women, who have their life influenced by violent partner.
