

Abstract

This bachelor thesis is focused on an art and historical analysis of complex of buildings of Pilsen town hall. Central part of this komplex is renaissance building built on an order of town council by italian builder Giovanni de Stazia in year 1555. It is set into the place of an older town hall's building so-called Big house. The same architekt built for an private purpose right part of so-called Imperial house (house number 290), which is also today's part of town hall complex of buildings. Imperial house is a architectural work created by Giovanni Maria Filippi, who built it from two different houses in year 1609. Pilsen renaissance architecture is a great example of „Czech renaissance“. Architecture forms, which were used, refers to contemporary demonstrations of renaissance in Czech, but first of all they reflect instigations of Italian renaissance. Pilsen town hall was reconstructed by Jan Koula in the years 1902–1910.
