

This thesis describes a typical process of acquisition of a shareholding interest in a limited liability company. In each of the phases of the process, the thesis identifies and analyses the main problems and questions related to the transfer of a shareholding interest, and also provides recommendations as to how to reduce or eliminate the related risks. Further, the pertinent issue is compared to the legal regulation after the new Civil Code and the Act on Business Corporations enter into effect.