Abstract

Theme works: Movement activity in children with ADHD: Literature review

Goal: The goal was to make literature review about children with ADHD and learn how to involve these children in movement activities.

Methods: Thesis was made as a theoretical study in the form of a literature review, focusing on the summary of current findings about movement activities in children with ADHD.

Results: I studied scientific books, papers and articles dealing with children with ADHD and I thought about the possibilities of using movement activity in children with ADHD. In most of these publications authors focus on pre-school age children just marginally. More attention have children visiting first and second degree schools. In this time they meet physical education there, which may lead to first detection of ADHD.

Keywords: ADHD, hyperactivity, movement activity, physical education
