Scheduling represents an interesting and difficult problem of combinatorial automated secondary school timetabling. We describe an implementation of a timetabling system, which combines constraint programming with local search techniques. The system allows user to make manual changes in the timetable during the computation.