

A clustering framework (Egocentric) is presented in this thesis. It was programmed in the Java 1.5 SE language and its time and memory requirements are lower than those of all similar open source projects found by the author. The thesis provides information about the implementation, includes a demonstration of the project's operation, its options, user's guide and a comparison with an existing framework.