Project "Computer aided design of database relation schemes" shows the importance and problems with designing nowadays Database schemas and gives ideas on possible solutions to these problems. Its main purpose is to describe a solution on optimizing Database designing that is transforming database schemas into tables. These tables should also fulfill the requirements based on the need for data consistency and database maintenance. Main part of this project is an application, which implements algorithms for solving these problems in an efficient way.