

The name of this Bachelor thesis is Residential social services for seniors in Valašskomeziříčsko. It introduces residential social services for seniors in the region and attempts at evaluating their current situation. It presents their main problems. The thesis is divided into seven main chapters. The beginning of the thesis is devoted to old age and aging. The introduction of these concepts is there. It describes basic human needs and problems associated with old age. The middle of the thesis is concentrated on social work with seniors. Its specificity and description of responsibilities of a social worker in a residential social service for elderly people are performed there. Next part of the thesis names social services which are provided to these people. The following section focuses on region of Valašskomeziříčsko, on its characteristics, community planning of social services in Valašské Meziříčí and local social services for seniors. Residential social services for elderly people in this region are described in a particular chapter. The final chapter deals with evaluating of these services.