

Abstract

The dissertation work “Victimization and the possibilities of the victimological prevention” is dealing with the dilemma of crime victims with a focus on victimological perspective. The main thesis of this work is dealing with the rights of the victims, related to their solicitude, which are not sufficiently anchored in the Czech legal rules, on the contrary to the criminal procedure of the victims. The first chapters are dealing with the themes of criminology, victimology and victimization. Next there is an analysis of the international documentation and Czech legal rules which are concerned with the rights of crime victims in terms of solicitude. Then there is the description of a draft law about crime victims, which is the subject of legal process nowadays. At the end of the work there are chapters describing the real help to victims in praxis and the proposals de lege ferenda.
