

ABSTRACT

This theses focuses on the issue of study of foreigners from formal Soviet Union in the Czech Republic.

The goal of this work is to analyse and evaluate steps on the student's journey from initial idea to study in the Czech Republic, through main obstacles that need to be overcome in the process to basic requirements and necessities that need to be fulfilled.

These issues were analyzed in eight connected chapters, six theoretical and two practical.

Results of the practical part uncover the most problematic areas a foreign student encounters during the study at the college in the Czech Republic. The paper also includes suggested solutions to these problems.
