

Abstract

Theme of my rigorous thesis is personally legal means to ensure claims in civil law. This thesis contains information about different types of security institutes under the Civil Code, which can be used by subjekts of civil relations to ensure their contractual relationship. In the fifth part of Civil Code governing obligations, we can meet with seven types of security legal claims. Base on that I arranged my thesis on eight chapters, which each of them devoted security claims individually. Because I focused on personal security legal claims, we don't find neither the pledge rights nor pledge contract. The reason why my thesis don't mention institute of fund, is that in the interpretation of law it is not consider to be an individual security claim.

The first chapter is dedicated to assurance at the municipal level, familiarizing with its rules, types and functions. The second to seventh chapter already discussed the different types of security means that are a contractual penalty, liability, an agreement on wage deductions and other income, security transfer rights, security transfer of the claim and at least, an acknowledgment of debt.