

Dissertation is focusing on the scope of social economy and social enterprises in the Czech republic namely in terms of czech law. Dissertation is portioned out to two main parts, while in first of them - theoretical part - is primarily described number of important concepts of social enterprise and social economy in wider (euroamerican) context. In sequential section, there is still described stage of social economy and social enterprises in Czech republic namely by the help of historical analysis and description single social economy subjects in legal terms. Last section of theoretical part is focused on legal analysis of czech social economy subjects in terms of , what kind of opportunities and constraints in the scope of entrepreneurship and for-profit activity provide czech legislature to this legal subjects. Second main part - empirical - confronts with practices theoretically realized fact, in an effort to- mainly- find out, to what extent czech social enterprises make use on opportunities to enterprising and for-profit activity, that allows them czech law.