

The aim of this theoretical-empirical thesis was to examine the principles of cooperative teaching while working on business letters within the lessons of Commercial-legal Correspondence at secondary school. The main objective of the research was to compare student's results – students' marking in two groups of students following the different types of educational methods: cooperation and non-cooperation. The students in both groups were acquainted with given criteria of assessment and final analysis of their work.