

Bakalářská práce: Administrátoři in materialibus v českých diecézích

Michal Olekšák

Abstract

Bachelor thesis „Administrators in materialibus in Czech dioceses“ is dealing with the issues connected to the activity of administrators in materialibus – or in other words administrators of church property – in the dioceses of Czech church province. Due to the lack of information and non-existence of relevant literature, the purpose and meaning of the service of administrators in materialibus in the church is often misunderstood. In the theoretical part of the thesis, administrator in materialibus is defined and clearly specified, distinguished from other similar terms, primarily on the basis of the Code of Canon Law provisions regarding the administration of church property. It is followed by brief outline of duties and tasks resulting from the role of the administrator in materialibus, then by historical excursion into the development of church's relationship to property and its administration with the accent on the events in the last 65 years. Theoretical part of the thesis is concluded by the chapter dedicated to Saint Lawrence and Blessed Hroznata, who can be role models for the service of administrators today. Second, practical part of the thesis, contains research aimed both at the service of administrators in materialibus in the dioceses as well as work and activities of individuals in particular parishes. The objective of the research is to gain better understanding of real activity of administrators in materialibus in various dioceses and parishes, and formulating specific conclusions that could become inspiration for new, actual concept of the service of administrators in materialibus here.