

Abstract

The aim of this paper is to analyze main approaches in the study of euroscepticism and to categorize them into the definition of Party-based euroscepticism which based on criteria defined to apply the theory to a particular political party. I will prove this in the example of the Civic democratic party. From these observations it will be obvious that euroscepticism in Central and East European countries is typical mainly for right-wing parties. ODS is a typical example of a right-wing euroscepticism political party which can be applied to the theory presented. I will empirically refer to the development of party's attitude in various time periods. As far as the content itself is considered it is interesting to observe a difference between the party's preferences and the emphasis which supports the euroscepticism approach.

Keywords

Euroscepticism, European Integration, Party System, Party Politics, Civic Democratic Party