

My thesis, based on a quantitative content analysis of a sample of television news by the "constructed fourteen days" in 2004, showed that displaying daily events with the help of intelligence narrative techniques helps leads to these sessions be told what is happening around us in different ways, even just through the use of other narrative techniques.