

Abstract

This thesis is focused on legal status of women in the Czech labour law, especially to the equal treatment and the prohibition of discrimination, as a one of the most common legal principle. The thesis describes the historical evolution of legal status of women in the Czech republic, narrates and assesses the contemporary legal regulation, describes the direction of the future legal regulation and compares it with the contemporary legal regulation.

