In the present work we study applied cryptography. The goal of this work is not to study algorithms from the mathematical or statistical view, instead we are trying to look at cryptography from a point of view of the “end consumer or “programmer. It should help the reader to find an appropriate algorithm for his program. The application on the end of the work is written to as readable as possible.