Reviewer comments:

Theoretical and practical part is written transparently, systematically and clearly. The theme of this work is very interesting and important for understanding differences in patient behavior and for designing drug policy serves to rationalization of pharmacotherapy. Also handling of literature is on a very professional level. Work contains a minimum of typing errors. Only several clarification regarding the methodology and interpretation of results is appropriate:

Questions:

1. "The patients that visited the pharmacy were randomly selected" How they were randomly selected?
2. Could the timing of data collection during the Christmas holidays affect the results?
3. How did you managed to achieve 100% of response rate?
4. It was any special type of pharmacy – only 2.4% of the visitors were older than 60 years and 71% had a university degree?

My proposed evaluation of diploma thesis is "excellent" and I "recommended" to defense.
