

This thesis deals with the Low threshold facilities (shortly LTF) for children and youth and a method of work with high risk youth

The aim is to describe and analyse the methods of work in this facilities.

In the theoretical part, this analysis is based on the study of professional literature. The theoretical part explains the situation that affects children and adolescents in a risk ways.

The practical part is based on qualitative research, which were provided in concrete LTF through the interview with clients and employee of LTF. Method of interview was supplied by involved observation.

The data analysis resulted in several facts. Free time activities became the important motive for attendance at club. Through free time activities, social work is provided with the help of other method such as consultancy, informative service, situation and crisis intervention. Streetwork is a specific method, where all services are provided to the target group at the street.
