

This work contains comparisons between visitation in the Brethren church and supervision in social work. Those techniques have some common areas and within this work they will be exposed to dialogue where by the author, from the position of social worker, will examine the influence of secular techniques on this sacral technique. Both techniques will be inspected from various aspects and at the end of every chapter the author will reflect on this dialogue. During this work the research questions will be stated and we will search to answer these questions. Evaluation of this search will be at the end of this work. There are also attachments where we can see the visitation process.
