Abstract

This bachelor thesis approaches seismicity in Peru. It describes the origin of tectonic earthquakes and provides a general description of the basic concepts of seismology. This thesis work is mainly focused on a detailed characterization of seismic activity in Peru. It includes a complete description of the geodynamics of the Peruvian territory, the evolution and distribution of seismicity in this South American country and its geomorphological units.