

ABSTRACT

This thesis is about arterial Hypertension in relationship with Atherosclerosis, where people with high blood pressure are more likely to develop coronary artery disease. Both health diseases are serious for continuing of life.

The rationale of this thesis is to examine and analyze at the first part of this thesis, the arterial hypertension, then we will examine all about atherosclerosis and at the last stage we are going to analyze the relationship between the two of them.

In the examination of hypertension and atherosclerosis is concluded the treatment methods in both, the drugs including use, dosage and everything concerns drugs therapy.

Prevention and management of hypertension and atherosclerosis will also include in this thesis diploma.